

This list contains the signatories of the Open Letter calling on the waiving of healthcare students' debt, addressed to Michelle Donelan MP and Rt. Honourable Matt Hancock MP, the Minister of State for Universities and Secretary of State for Health and Social Care respectively.

(This list was updated on Friday 15th May, 2020)

Please add me to the list of signatories. My full name is:	Please tell us why you are supporting this campaign:	Affiliations:
Henry Setter	Students have been called up to protect our NHS from being overwhelmed, this is something that cannot be forgotten	Greenwich Students' Union
Jo Curtis	I've never agreed with students from and healthcare roles being charged fees to study. It seems even more unfair given the current circumstances where students have stepped in to support the NHS.	No
John Schless	Students shouldn't be in debt to support me	Greenwich University - SU Staff
Uzma Arif-Fryer	This is so important that healthcare students who have stepped up to serve on the front line of Covid-19 are supported and that fees are waived in recognition of this.	Greenwich Students' Union
Richard Ward	Because they deserve to be dept free for risking their lives!	Yes
Henrietta Farrugia	Student nurses or other faculties deserve a debt waver for their hard work during covid 19.	Northampton university
Hannah Murphy	Because I'm a final year nursing student deployed to the hospital for the final 6 months of my training and am currently using my 20 minute break to sign this letter.	Keele University
Bethany Seale	Healthcare students deserve to be recognised for their sacrifice.	Keele University
Abigail Mary Anne	I'm a third-year student midwife, and I am going to be deployed to work early to help the covid response.	Keele university
Linda Gardiner	I think it is the right thing to do. These young students at the end of their courses are suddenly flung onto the front line and are expected to function as more knowledgeable colleagues.	No
Sunna Ali	I feel that many students have sacrificed a lot to continue working on the front line. I believe this will make it easier for them and the burden.	Keele Uni
Joseph Ross-Nelson	Healthcare students can find times hard enough when it comes to balancing their academics, placements, relationships and student experience. To be willing to go further and join the front-line support to tackle this Covid-19 pandemic is beyond commendable.	University of Greenwich

Aisha Alison khan	I am a student nurse and agree with the above statement.	Yes
Rebecca Amy Bloomer	The work by healthcare workers has become widely acknowledged in the current crisis as amazing. Many students, including people I'm friends with, have placements on Covid-19 wards and are rocking their lives to help our country. Therefore I feel that they should be recognised for this work and have their fees waived as a thank you for their help in the current crisis	University of Greenwich
Charlotte Kingsley	I am a second year adult nursing student.	Lewisham and Greenwich NHS trust
Jack Christopher Medlin	Students paying 9,000 for the privilege of fighting on the front line is unjust. They have paid their dues a million times beyond what could have ever been expected and thus deserve any debt to be wiped.	Keele University
Aqib Saleem	I'm supporting this campaign because the university is not giving not gave the proper online classes and they charged the full fees we were supposed to take lecture but because of COVID-19 it was not happen so as a international student I came here to study in the campus I paid my fees to study in campus not in online classes I'm paying my accommodation and fees as well for what ? To take online classes that's not fair they should refund us the fees of a year of atleast a term	University of Greenwich
Nilgyun Murad	Healthcare students need to be supported! Third year students are the only cohort that is not entitled to any kind of bursary and yet the majority of them did not hesitate to opt in to support NHS. Waiving the fees is the least that can be done to acknowledge their courage and commitment.
Gemma Maybank	These students are helping the whole country by being with the NHS and supporting them during these hard times. For all the hard work they do, this is what they deserve.	University of Greenwich
Bethany Aldrich	I am a student who has suffered	University of Greenwich
Megan Parish	They deserve the recognition for their hard work, it is appreciated!	University of Greenwich
Tara Campbell	I am a student paramedic who has been working throughout the pandemic, and due to Univeristy being closed, have not been able to attend my usual timetabled activities.	University of Greenwich
Gordon Watson	I do not believe that education should be a profit making industry especially when there is such a need for nurses	No
Deborah Ajeleti	As students we've done countless of hours for placement helping the NHS with no bursary, loan or grants. Many of us have decided to opt in and have been helping the NHS during corona virus.	University of Hertfordshire
Hannah Olatunbosun	The students have worked hard, put themselves at risk and deserve their tuition fees to be waived.	Greenwich University
Usman Ahmed	I am supporting this campaign because I am a student who understands the harsh reality of young people especially teenagers. As my self and many I have severe mental health issues but still stay	University of Greenwich strong no matter how hard life is I get on. I am not a wealthy person from a wealthy background and I and my friends want out life to be easier and better by having the Tution fees waived for everyone.

Holly Allen	They are training for a role to save lives!! And they are doing that now! No financial debt should be experienced by students training to be such a massive part of society which is so understaffed already	The University of Northampton
Oluwatoyin	Nurses are crucial work, they should be appreciated.	University of Greenwich
Charlotte White	Because I have been impacted greatly by this, and so have my studies.	University of Greenwich
Heather Brown	I am a second year adult nurse student.	Greenwich university and GSST
Rachael E	I don't think that it's fair for healthcare students, who put their lives at risk by working on the front line, to be fined with university fees when we're not even getting the full university experience due to lockdown.	Yes, I study Pharmacy at UoG
Jonathon Vobe	The letter says it all. we should never be a country of slave labour	University of Northampton
Tilly Ahmed	3rd year student nurse who has opted into the extended placement during the COVID19 crisis.	Keele University
Ginoshia Elangaiventhan	I'm a NHS Healthcare worker and looking after Covid-19 patients. I am a student as well. I believe all healthcare workers who are on front-line deserve a reward.	Yes
Callum Smith	-
Syeda Ali	I believe that the fee debt should be waived, mainly due to the fact that this year, we have not even had many classes this year. My lecturers were on strike in the second semester (when we were meant to start the exam material) and straight after that we had gone in to lockdown. In my opinion, I believe it is unfair for students to have to pay the fee for an academic year in which we had not received the full support which we should have received.	University of Greenwich
Caitlin Jenner	For my friends completing healthcare degrees
Alice Davies	The students who have stepped up in this crisis deserve to not have the additional stress of student loans on their back. They are risking their lives as young people to help the country.	Keele University
Neal Tank	Because healthcare students are risking their lives for us, just to be saddled with debt at the end of this	Queen Mary, University of London
Eileen Cordier	The student nurses have been thrust into the hospital wards. Some may even be on the front line. That have had to leave there finally exams and go to work and as far I know not getting paid as still classed as students even though doing the same work as there qualified colleges. So this is the least our government can do to help them out, the way they have stepped up to help our NHS	No

Carla Louanne Corns	As a healthcare student who has had to self fund her course to achieve her qualification, I have financially struggled to ensure I can complete this course. In light of the recent COVID 19 epidemic, I feel that sacrifices of all who work within the NHS has been highlighted and that students, like myself who are paying the trust are working with no financial recompense. I feel this would be an excellent gesture, and prove the governments value of the healthcare workforce, instead of accepting labour that a student has paid for from their own pocket instead of been paid for their time and committment	Hull York Medical School
Patience lyoha Omoruyi	I am supporting this campaign on behalf of the students who had risked their lives to save lives	No
Olufunmilola Osibodu	I am a student affected by the debt	Yes
Emily Jade Whitehouse	The nurses, who are still studying and are still students, are fighting against this global pandemic. They are heroes saving the world for no other reason than it's the right thing to do, They should recieve recognition for their work, and more than just some people clapping on the streets.	University of Northampton
Anna Dodridge	I am super proud of any student who chooses to dedicate their career to healthcare and the wellbeing of our community. As a society we must support that choice, and recognise the contribution being made by all in the healthcare sector, and those who are at the beginning of their lives in caring for others.	SOAS, University of London
Chantelle Maria Crompton	Because people I have met and will be living with in the next year are tackling this issue while juggling their other responsibilities. Selfless acts of kindness deserve recognition no matter where they come from.	University of Northampton
Yosmhara Fuentes	We all wouldn't be here right now if it wasn't for the NHS staff. These students need all the support they can get.	University of Greenwich
Jessica-Sky Motion	These students are stepping up in an incredibly difficult time at great risk to themselves. It's only right they get the recognition and support they deserve.	University of Greenwich alumni & Current Goldsmiths student
Chelsea Jade Copping	It's only fair on the students	University of Greenwich
Holly Cogger	Anyone who's working the frontline while still studying should not be paying tuition fees especially due to not receiving any support with their learning.
Jessica Webb	Student nurses deserve much more than this!! They're working so hard and not even getting the rewards they should be getting.	University of Greenwich
Alan Delaney-munn	Paramedic that studied at Greenwich. And got into a massive amount of debt.	London Ambulance Service NHS Trust.

		HPCPC. Greenwich university
Helena Carroll	Partner is a paramedic im a police officer. I think all public service employees should have their fees waved	International police federation. British transport police. Greenwich university
Keshena Lyddiatt	I am a student Nurse/ bank healthcare assistant and 100% agree that healthcare students debts should be zeroed.	Keele University
Christina Connolly	Nurses and doctors are vital to the NHS and are being disadvantaged by saddling them with student debt, when they are all working in the NHS while studying, for the benefit of everyone, including politicians.	I am a student nurse at Greenwich university
Francesca Tratt	I am supporting this campaign due to the stress we have had on our NHS staff, and specifically the new students going into full roles without warning. With cuts and the new pressure that they are under they deserve to have less debt as they are helping this country get better again.	University of Greenwich
Samantha Lyddiatt	I am a qualified occupational therapist and have been for 11 years, My daughter is a first year adult nursing student and my son has applied for an MSc course in physiotherapy. With all the staff shortages within the NHS, I think it is imperative that the student debt is waived now and in the future to encourage young people to enter these professions and support the NHS going forward in the future.	No
Courtney-Leigh Dearing	The student nurses and midwives deserve to have their fees waived for the sacrifices they have made to protect the health of us all.	University of Greenwich
Hoa Kim Hoang	I am a student	Medway School of Pharmacy
Sarah Cretch	Because it was wrong they were ever charged fees when they work full time learning on the job and now they also risk their lives.	No
Nomso Emerenwah	I believe that Health Care students have been in the front-line during this unprecedented times, providing support to Covid victims and other vulnerable people. By taking care and supporting them back to good health. we have put our own lives at risk and some of our colleagues have died doing their job. It is only fair that we are appreciated by waiving our tuition debt.	yes
Sami Sharif	I am supporting my fellow University of Greenwich students, who are risking their lives in treating and saving Covid-19 patients, all while still being at university. I urge the government to waive their student debts as a gratitude for their amazing work.	University of Greenwich

Bernadette Gowland	I am a student nurse and have opted in to work on the front line during this pandemic.	University of Greenwich
Victoria Black	I am a student nurse. I return from placement everyday in tears. Help me	Keele
Karen Tanner	These students are putting their lives at risk to help in this pandemic and should get some reward for their efforts	My daughter is a student at Keele
Chenai mufanawejingo	Fees to be waived	Greenwich University
Jodi Thom	To support our incredible front NHS workers
Gabrielle Tanner	They deserve it	University of Central Lancashire
Cassandra Cox	I am a student nurse who has opted in to help! :)	University of Manchester
Tamara Holt	They should be getting paid for risking their lives, not having to pay to do so.	University of Northampton
Holly Tanner	Because they have been thrown into a stressful situation with little experience other than what has been gained in their degree, they are putting their lives at risk	Keele University
George Laughton	2nd Year Student Paramedic	University of Greenwich
Chioma Comfort Ochonma	Its is only fair that these students are been recognized and will inspire other students to join this worthy cause. Because together we stand.	Greenwich University.
Emma Sangster	We shouldn't have to pay for tuition we aren't getting. Also, we're the ones putting our lives and families lives on the line to save the country, we shouldn't have to pay to do this	University of Greenwich
Gabriele Cucinella	I believe its the right thing to do.
Lucy Anne Burchell	I'm a student paramedic.	University of Greenwich
Alex Nelson	I am a nurse and I can relate to this message	East Sussex Healthcare Trust
Emily Warren	2nd year student nurse now working for the nhs	University of Greenwich
Emily Pearson	Friends who are healthcare students	University of Greenwich
Josef Ogden	Because they deserve it	Home Office
Ms Verity Lancaster	I'm a student midwife in my final year, the PPE available in maternity is completely inadequate, the facemasks are open at the sides. The 9/17 healthcare cohort have been completely used and abused by the government so far and it has to stop.	Greenwich University

Tania Struetzel	Healthcare students who have volunteered to work at the front line are key workers risking their lives to save others during this pandemic. This graduating cohort won't be benefiting from NHS bursaries so the least we can do is to waive their student debts in recognition of their vital contribution to society.
Hannah Milne	To support student healthcare workers and show appreciation.
Grace Thomson	These fees deserve to be waved! I want to support my fellow students.
Apsana Begum MP	A constituent of mine has written to me requesting support. I support calls on the Government to write off student debt for those who have already been helping on the frontline.	No.
Mrs Louise Charlotte Lancaster	The sacrifice and commitment of student nurses and midwives needs to be recognized. These workers are the future of the NHS and we need to support and protect them.	I work in a secondary school as a key worker and teacher of students with special educational needs,. My daughter is a student midwife in her third year.
Mr Tim David Lancaster	The students have not got what they have paid for this year and they are making a contribution to help everyone, putting themselves at risk. They have throughout their courses spent vast amounts of time working for the NHS and not being paid for their efforts.	No
Meike Imberg	I support this campaign because it's important these healthcare students get support - they have made the difficult decision to put their studies aside and step up to the front lines to support everyone during the pandemic and this absolutely deserves to be recognised.	I used to with the University of Greenwich
shaham kolleri palakkampokkil	i am also an international student. i know how much other students are struggling in this current situation. hope govt will take a good decision in this .because i believe in uk govt.	Greenwich university
Shaista anjum	I am really touched by what all these people are doing.	Yes, University of Greenwich
(Lady) Christine Dorothy Jennings	It seems unfair that a student nurse -- especially one who has broken off studies to serve in dangerous hospital duties -- should have to pay to complete training. I know personally a young student midwife whose studies have been interrupted while she serves in hospital during the Covid-19 emergency.	I am an Oxford graduate, from a time years ago when few students paid their full fees.
Jennifer freeman	vital work for our country on the frontlines they shouldn't need to be burdened with still having to pay student debts	University of Hull

Mohamed Fakhriy AL-Kaisi	Health care students risking their life for us while we are sitting relaxing inside our home. We need more people to get into health care now more than ever. By taking the debt out people will start get into it.	University of Greenwich
Deborah Meller	These junior healthcare workers have stepped up to relieve pressure on the NHS at this national time of need and without their full complement of training. Their tuition will no doubt still be payable without them receiving the full course so I feel it appropriate to waive their last year fees in recognition of their service.	No
Elisha Williams
Jessica Rachel Pinches	Because the conservative government out to be good to those helping the people with real, useful jobs rather than hoarding wealth like the lazy, elitist bastards that they are	Study at Oxford Brookes
Andrea Munoz	I have friends who are student nurses and who are working very hard to keep people alive. They're putting themselves at risk to save others. I myself have been ill and injured many times and have needed hospitalisation. I have seen first-hand that nurses do the majority of work and are absolutely indispensable to the regular workings of a hospital and this is especially true in the middle of a pandemic with a virus so infectious. If the government isn't going to provide adequate PPE or implement stricter lockdown measures to protect them, the least they can do is to waive fees.
Francesca Roberts	Because healthcare students are putting themselves at risk and working long hours to protect the public, they should not pay to do this.	Imperial College London
Fiona Davis	These students are carrying the burden of caring for the community during the pandemic when they have not even completed their degrees yet. They didn't sign up for this!	University of Birmingham
Basirat Lolade Lawal	I am supporting this campaign because I want the government to waive our students debt.	Yes, I study at the university of Greenwich
Lydia Hamilton-Rimmer	Medical and healthcare professionals should not have to pay fees to work for the NHS let alone when they are finishing studying earlier to risk their lives and save others	Student at university of Birmingham
Chelsea Meg Brandon	As a third year social work student I am currently on placement during this pandemic which has meant I play a key role in the essential work of a social work team. This campaign recognises the key work students play in responding to the covid-19 pandemic and I agree that students should be recognised for this by waiving some debt.	Keele University
Alixlyne Quaye	I am a 3rd year student, first year group to pay for midwifery training. My learning has been affected due to close of university. For this reason i believe the debt should be cleared and bursaries reintroduced.	University of greenwich and barts health
Usha Parmar	Because nurses work ridiculously hard and the nhs gets loads of free labour off them so it's the humane thing to do	Keele university

Morgan Farnham	The service that these students are paying to the country leaves the Government and the public forever indebted to them, therefore waiving their tuition fees is a minor thank you for the incredible service they are doing to protect us all, at their own risk.	University of Greenwich
Luke Arscott	They are responding to a difficult situation and need all the help they can get!	University of Greenwich
Kieran Teague	I agree that the fees should be waived, I've lost out on valuable placement and academic time and feel I haven't had the full years experience.	Greenwich University, Royal Cornwall Hospital Treliske
Muhammad Sajid	our uni has a big health and social work students network, as a lot of students are on the front line, govt should thank them for standing up and should give something back, Why are students paying when they are putting their lives at risk ?	Hertfordshire Students Union
Emily Harrison	Final year medical and healthcare professional students were graduated two months earlier than standard. This means that they have missed out on roughly 15 weeks of their Assistantships or Electives (enhanced placement to prepare them for transition to F1) which are important parts of their degree. Furthermore, the reason for the early graduation was so that they could go and work on the front line sooner. Whilst admirable, it seems entirely unreasonable that they should continue to make them pay fees whilst they are risking their lives to help us during this global health crisis. If the government wanted to support fully its medical and healthcare students and society, it could have graduated them early and refunded the fees for the time missed. Government are getting a win by generating more human resource for front-line NHS work, yet students are having to pay? This does not make sense and in no other section of society would worker have to pay for the privilege of work. This needs to be rectified and these students compensated with more than a two minute clap on a Thursday evening.	President of Southampton University Students' Union
Rida Shafqat	Healthcare students are already contributing so much to our society. they are risking their lives for the benefit of others, it's not fair to have them pay on top of everything they are doing. They are paying with their services to the community.	Hertfordshire Students' Union (President)
Rhea Marsden	because this is a global pandemic and the voluntary work healthcare students are doing is inspiring and they deserve to be rewarded	No

Sara Khan	Education is a right, not a privilege, and tuition fees of any kind should not exist in the first place. But ESPECIALLY not for those healthcare students who are stepping in to work completely unpaid to help in this crisis! Fees for healthcare students must be waived!	University of Manchester Students' Union
Jennie Treglohan-Clayden	I know how hard students are studying and working right now. Just as much as fully qualified workers.	No
Lucy brown	I am a 3rd year paramedic student and while I want to be working on the front line at such a vital time the costs of placement and staying in university housing has had a big effect on my finance.	University of Hertfordshire
Savannah salsone	I am a physiotherapy student and have stepped up on the front line to work too!	University of Hertfordshire
Carys Davies	I am a third year physiotherapy student working on the front line during covid 19	University of Hertfordshire
Natalie Collier	I'm a final year physiotherapy student at the University of Hertfordshire, one who never wished to work in the NHS however, I have stepped up to help on the frontline both as a student on placement and as a student on the temporary HCPC register. We have contributed immensely to helping people, in a way not expected, and it would show a huge amount of appreciation if our tuition fees were waived as a thank you for our work.	University of Hertfordshire
Rabia Butt	I am a student nurse myself and want to show my fellow colleagues how much I appreciate them	University of Hertfordshire
Tobar MacPhail	I am a healthcare student who will be working during the pandemic on a clinical placement	Yes
Salwa Anguparu	As a final year Physiotherapy student, I have had to step up and help out on the frontline	Physiotherapy
Eleanor Elston	Because I support my fellow student paramedics	University of Hertfordshire
Harriet Podmore	As a student paramedic and healthcare worker I have stepped up to work during the coronavirus pandemic along with the rest of the UKs healthcare workers. Over our time at university we work 100s of hours along our mentors on the front line of the NHS for free but once we finish we face thousands of pounds of debt. Those who have stepped up doing the pandemic have risked their studies by working full time hours and putting themselves at risk many living away from home and family.	University of Hertfordshire. East of England ambulance trust
Konrad Farrall	I'm a health see student
Emma Grace	I am a student paramedic	University of Hertfordshire, London Ambulance Service

Georgina Ollivent	I have spent the majority of my course working on shift as a student nurse with no pay and having to take a large maintenance loan to support myself as no more than 15 hours a week was allowed to be worked outside of the course as part of the course contract. I have spent many nights and days caring for the vulnerable with little breaks as the placements were understaffed. To add insult to injury the government are bringing back the bursary scheme for the students in the years below. Plus the starting salary for a nurse is only just over the threshold in which you pay back the loan. I am now currently working on the front-line as a student who has lost their supernumerary status to aid with the fight against corona virus whilst also still having to study full time. In addition to this I have to live away from my family at this uncertain time.	University of Hertfordshire
Elena Abela	Students have rushed degrees and not got final summers to enjoy instead are working hard in volatile times	Hertfordshire
Hannah Palmer	I am a paramedic science student so understand the difficulties that are being faced	University of Hertfordshire
Joseph Jones	I'm a fellow healthcare student trying to do my bit	University of Hertfordshire
Scarlett Olney	Many of my fellow student paramedics have stepped up to help during the covid 19 crisis.	University Of Hertfordshire
Sampson Okafor	Felt it's only right health care student who were courage to carry on supporting staffs with the delivery of care, mostly during this pandemic.	Hertfordshire university
Maisie Cryer	I have seen the work my fellow students have put in when they didn't need to and be so supportive to everyone in the community and they deserve to be thanked.	University of Hertfordshire
Emma Elizabeth Danie	I'm a third-year radiography student and feel we as the 2017 cohort have really drawn the short end of the straw. Entering the NHS during a crisis and with a 40k+ student debt looming over our heads for our lifetime seems exceedingly unfair	University of Hertfordshire
Natalie hill	A student radiographer who has worked on the front line (for free) during the covid pandemic	University of Hertfordshire
Isabelle Baxter	As a third year healthcare student I have taken my exams early and will be going straight into work during the crisis in addition to working for free in the NHS throughout my degree. This third year group of students will be the ONLY year with absolutely no support or bursary from the government to help us.	University of Hertfordshire
Ranya alhamami	The only year to have paid the fees for a course with no bursary Honestly not fair	University of hertfordshire

David Sunday-Kalu	I am a radiographer and a final year student. I supported senior staff in screen covid patients in this challenging time without any incentive till later suggestion but the union. We were promised a stipend during placement during the changes to healthcare course but never materialised. We put our life and families lives for nothing. The least they can do for us now is to cancel part of our debt if not all.	Yes
Louise Barnes	I am a student nurse myself in my final year. I total for this academic year I only spent about 7 weeks at university with some of these weeks only being two days. Therefore most of my time has been spent in practice. I have opted in and I am out on placement however from September 12 weeks of my course has been spent serving the nhs with no pay instead paying 9,250 pounds to do this.	University of Hertfordshire
Niamh Phillips	Because lots of health care students have been on the front line risking their lives for free and deserve free education and for their debts to be written off as they work so hard to protect and the public for no money.	University of Hertfordshire
Briony Slade	I have friends all studying healthcare professions and they're having to risk their lives despite not being qualified.	University of Hertfordshire
